

Consultant Exchange

Welcome to the Q2 2019 Consultant Exchange Newsletter. In this issue, we recap our recent flagship event – Powering Potential. In addition to providing our position on market opportunities and industry challenges, we outline the ways in which BBH is helping our mutual clients unlock potential in their operating models. We also include two recent BBH thought leadership articles. The first explores how large asset owners are changing the alternatives landscape, and the other breaks down the Central Securities Depositories Regulation (CSDR), which could have vast implications for European securities settlement. Finally, get a pulse on the global ETF marketplace by watching our ETF webinar featuring Ryan Sullivan and Andrew Craswell.

The third annual BBH US Consultant Exchange, “Powering Potential,” was held in Boston in May. The event brought together consultants and industry influencers for an interactive discussion on market opportunities, industry challenges, and the ways BBH is helping its clients unlock potential in their operating models.

READ MORE

BBH experts focus on key trends, changing investor sentiment, and explore areas of innovation in the dynamic ETF marketplace.

READ MORE

For the world’s largest institutional asset owners, even relatively small shifts in their asset allocation models have an outsized impact on the investment industry. Here, we look at key alternative asset classes and how large investors are deploying capital to these areas.

READ MORE

Several CSDR provisions go into effect this year and will have implications for managers who invest in European securities. Yet many are still struggling to understand the implications of regulation. Here is a look at what operations teams should know as deadlines loom.

READ MORE